Chief Justice to Speak at the 2007 CANADIAN CONFERENCE ON ELDER LAW

Vancouver, BC: The Right Honourable Chief Justice of Canada Beverley McLachlin, P.C. will be speaking at the 2007 Canadian Conference on Elder Law (CCEL). The 2007 CCEL's theme is "Moving Forward, Moving Beyond" and examines issues surrounding elder abuse. Held at the Sheraton Vancouver Wall Centre in Vancouver, British Columbia, the CCEL draws presenters and attendees from around the world. Experts and advocates of elder law come to share knowledge and explore best practices.

This year's Conference will also feature Mr. Michael Valpy, Senior Writer for the Globe and Mail and Professor Rebecca Morgan, Boston Asset Management Faculty Chair in Elder Law at Stetson University College of Law. Tickets to the Conference and Keynote Address are available to the general public. The CCEL is put on by the Canadian Centre for Elder Law Studies (CCELS).

The Canadian Centre for Elder Law Studies

The CCELS is a not-for-profit organization committed to enriching and informing the lives of older adults in their relationship with the law, meeting the increased need for education and research in relation to legal issues of particular significance for older adults, and serving as a national focal point for this emerging field. The CCELS is a division of the British Columbia Law Institute.
